

Instructions - A game of Ludo for 2-4 players

Start

Each player chooses a coloured home area on the game board and sets the corresponding four coloured playing pieces on the area. If only two players are playing, then they can play with two colours.

Further course of the game

Take it in turns to roll the die – the player with the highest roll begins the game. Every time it's your turn, you roll the die and move a playing piece forward as many number of squares as the dice shows. You choose which of your pieces you want to move.

To move a playing piece from the home area, you must roll a six. If you roll a six, you may re-roll the die. If you roll a six in the extra toss, you can choose to move a new piece to the start square or move a piece six spaces forward.

You always have to move a piece forward by the number of fields indicated on the die, also when it is damaging for you. More than one playing pieces of the same colour can stand on the same square.

If you land on a square which is occupied by someone else's playing piece, you capture it. The opponent's playing piece is sent back to their home area and has to start again from the beginning. However, if the opponent has more than one playing piece on the square it is you that is captured and is sent back home.

Once you reach the squares which are your colour on the way to the centre of the board, you can no longer be captured by the other players. When approaching the centre of the board, the number you roll with the die must be the exact number for reaching the centre. If you roll a number which is too high, you must turn around and move backwards the remaining number of places.

Winner

The first player to get all four playing pieces around the board and into the centre is the winner.
